About the Festival

Word Vancouver is a free community event and Western Canada's largest celebration of reading and writing. Held during the last week of September at various venues throughout Vancouver, the festival promotes literacy, books, authors, and publishers with readings, exhibits, performances, professional development workshops, and hands-on activities for a wide range of ages and interests, all for FREE.

History

Since 1995 The Vancouver Book and Magazine Fair Society has produced The Word On The Street Vancouver literary festival, which in 2013 rebranded with the new name Word Vancouver.

The festival is family friendly and brings together book lovers, literacy enthusiasts, literary exhibitors, and established and emerging authors. The very first festival was a one-day event at the then newly built Vancouver Public Library. The festival has now expanded to several days and attracts up to 25,000 attendees to events at venues such as Banyen Books & Sound, Historic Joy Kogawa House, and Library Square.

Why Should You Volunteer?

This festival is made possible by the dedication of our volunteers. It is the only way we can keep the festival free. Volunteering is a great way to be involved on a deeper level and to meet like-minded lovers of literature.

Volunteers will receive:

- An event t-shirt
- Food and drink
- Work experience
- Volunteer hours (including a verification document if desired)

Volunteer Opportunities

Pre-Festival:

- Distribution of marketing materials (Tuesday, September 4 to Friday, September 21)
- Administrative tasks in the office (Tuesday, September 4 to Friday, September 28)

Festival Events:

- Assist with author readings and workshops (Monday, September 24 to Saturday, September 29)
- Festival activities including Set-Up/Strike, Traffic Control/Greeter, Venue Captain, Info Booth (Saturday, September 29 and Sunday, September 30)
